

If I could choose any AKC purebred breed of dog, I would choose the English Bulldog. Why, you may ask? The bulldog, in my opinion, is the cutest of them all. From the wrinkly face, to smooshed down nose, and beautiful colors of skin, bulldogs are top dog on my list. Because of their such cuteness, I have had a wonderful experience to call a bulldog my pet for a short time. Bulldogs are very kind, love walks, can be aggressive, but in a good way, and love to just lay on you and watch some Netflix. :)

My personal experience with a bulldog was amazing. His name was Jack. He loved playing around, and barked whenever we would put tutu's around his waist. Though he didn't always like being a ballerina, he lived with it, since he lived in a house with nothing but girls and one boy.

Being people-oriented as a breed,(bulldogs) they actively solicit human attention. However, they have retained the courage that was originally bred into them for bull baiting, so they make fine watch dogs.

My bulldog, Jack, had white skin with brown splattered all over his skin. He loved to wrestle with my dad, and when he did, you could hear his long nails scratch against the hardwood brown floor. You could tell he was trying his best. There was this one time, during the winter, we brought out our little red wagon, and Jack tried and tried to bite the little wheels off that thing. It was so funny! He was slipping and sliding in the snow, and wrestled with that poor little red wagon. He never actually got the wheels off of it, but it was his new favorite chew toy. :)

Sadly, we eventually had to give away Jack to another single man, but we will forever remember him and he will always be a part of our family. ♡
